To My Valentine
Fancy hearts and cupids
Dancing in a row...
A sentimental message
All designed to show...
Love for your beloved,
Wrapped in charm and grace,
Valentine's own greeting
Told on hearts of lace.

IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

At IPI, we hammer out all the details of our One Step construction loans up front — so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

Madison Avenue Quality at Factory Prices!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Fisticuffs, Fire, Floods And Other Occurrences At Restaurants In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

When my daughter Maya finished her schooling a couple of years ago, she got it into her head that she wanted to open a restaurant out here in the Hamptons. I have no idea why. She had gone to Sarah Lawrence College and got a degree in art. Being a restaurant owner after that made perfect sense, I guess.

Anyway, we went to see a broker and drove out one day to look at various properties; one of them was a beer joint, situated down in a hole, in a parking lot in Sag Harbor. Maya thought she would convert it into some kind of coffee house with jazz, which I guess wasn't such a bad idea considering what had happened to some of the other Sag Harbor beer joints on Main Street. The Sand Bar and Black Buoy used to be places that people got thrown out of onto the sidewalk. Today they serve more than Italian Cuisine; something unrecognizable with peanuts from the Pacific Rim and designer water. The beer joint in the parking lot however, which was known as Jakes, was different. There is a problem with flooding, the realtor told us. "What does that mean?" I asked Jake.

"Oh, if we have a heavy rainstorm and it coincides with the high tide in the harbor," he said, "we have to shut down."

I didn't like the sound of this. Maya went back and saw Jake several times, but I was the one with the wallet.

"But dad", she said, "it only happens two or three times a year."

But I just couldn't bring myself to lay out the money for this, and eventually the urge to own a restaurant, on my daughter's part, passed.

Running a restaurant, in fact, dining in a restaurant these days, is a complicated business. They no longer sling the hash and put a blue plate special in front of you with meatloaf and mashed potatoes, although, a group tried to revive that tradition by opening the Honest Diner some ten years-ago. The effort failed after a couple of years. Eating out is just a little more complicated than that and a whole lot more unpredictable.

The rest of this article will consist of some anecdotes that have either happened to me or have happened to others, or at least they say they've happened. I offer them up without apology. Running and eating in a restaurant can be hazardous to your health.

...smoke began billowing out of the kitchen. "It's nothing..." the maitre 'd said.

For example, there was the case of Drew Nieporent, who today is one of the top restaurateurs in the city of New York; the other is Warner LeRoy. Ten years ago though, Nierpont was a rising young star and as the manager of East Hampton Point, the waterfront restaurant in East Hampton, he was called upon to deal with an angry customer who didn't like the particular red wine he had been served. The customer was leaving but had stopped to say a few words loudly at the maitre 'ds podium. Nieporent came over and told the man to calm down upon which the man threw a right cross, laying Nieporent flat on the well-polished floor. The next day it was on Page Six of the New York Post.

There was the elegant grand opening of the restaurant on One Ocean Road in Bridgehampton about that time. I went to it. J.G. Melon had been at that site for about fifteen years and I was interested to see what would replace it. The food was sort of Indian Continental; there were a lot of celebrities present and at the entrance there was a string quartet playing Handel's Water Music.

In the middle of all this excitement however, smoke began billowing out of the kitchen.

"It's nothing, it's nothing," the maitre d' said, waving a hand at some of the concerned patrons.

Soon however, the firemen, in full uniform, came

Actor Alton White is suing the New York City Police Department for falsely arresting and strip searching him. White plays Coalhouse Walker, Jr. in the Broadway musical Ragtime from the book by E.L. Doctorow of Sag Harbor.

ABC anchorman Peter Jennings of Bridgehampton, hosting New Year's Eve festivities for that network, put in an unprecedented 20 hour day and knocked out all the competition. ABC's ratings were higher than NBC's and CBS combined.

Hamptonite Ann Jones, wife of Foreigner rocker Mick Jones, spun records at Joe's Pub in Manhattan last week.

Herb Ross and Lee Radziwill, who almost sold their East Hampton home to Jerry Seinfeld last summer for $19 million are getting a divorce. Herb Ross has hired divorce attorney Stanford Lotwin.

Many Hamptonites and New Yorkers think East Hampton's Herman Badillo would make a great school chancellor, replacing Rudy Crew. Badillo is currently chancellor of the City University of New York.

Peri Wolfman, author of A Place for Everything, will appear at BookHampton on Main Street in East Hampton on Saturday, January 22, 5:30 p.m. There's something about a closet door that stimulates curiousity. Who among us doesn't want to take a peek behind it, especially, when it's in the home of a friend who has a real eye for design? Peri Wolfman and co-author Charles Gold have those very friends and they persuaded them to open their doors and share the secrets of stylish storage. After the reading Ms. Wolfman will answer questions and sign copies of her book.

racing through dragging fire hoses and disappeared into the kitchen.

"Just a small delay," The maitre'd said. The music continued, masking somewhat the smell of burnt brussel sprouts. It's really not easy running a restaurant.

I didn't actually see this myself, but I was told about a time that a diner in a restaurant in Southampton angrily stood up at his table and demanded that he be served a glass of water.

"But you haven't told me what kind of water," the waiter sputtered.

"Tap water," the diner shouted.

"Pellegrino? Perrier? We have a fine new water from Finland," the waiter said, raising his voice to match that of the patron's.

"What's wrong with your tap water? There's something wrong with the water here," the man said, turning to everyone at his table, "Let's get out of here." Now he turned to everyone in the restaurant. "The water is bad at this restaurant, don't eat here," He shouted. And he headed for the door. "I'm calling the Board of Health,"was the last thing he said before slamming the door behind him.

There is the astonishing story of the Blue Marlin restaurant in Montauk. It was Labor Day weekend, the owner had had been through the trials and tribulations of running the place all summer and now he had enough. With the place packed with people, many of them just getting their appetizers, he stormed out of the kitchen folded his arms and shouted, "Everybody out. The restaurant's closed. I've had it. Whatever you've eaten, it's on me; there's no bill. Everybody out." And everybody got out.

If it's tough on the owners, however, it's equally tough on the diners. In other parts of the country you might get a full dinner for twenty or twenty-five dollars, but in the Hamptons it could run triple or quadruple that per person. An evening out for two could cost as much as a good color television set.

I remember going to the opening of the Honest Diner, which in the fifties and early sixties had indeed been a hash house, greasy spoon diner. Then it closed and stood vacant for twenty-five years as the owner and his wife fought over it in a bitter divorce. Now the owners of Nick and Toni's along with several other partners had gotten the idea that sophisticates in the Hamptons would like to have a little mashed potatoes and meatloaf. Indeed, that's exactly what I ordered, but part of that nostalgic experience was that it was only fifty cents and this wasn't fifty cents. The restaurant lingered for about four years then closed, and has remained closed to this day.

Then there was the time I took my group of six people to Della Femina's restaurant in East Hampton. There was a baked salmon dish on the menu that caught my fancy. But the wording on the menu said lightly cooked; I asked the waitress if I could have it medium.

"I don't like raw fish," I said.

When it came out nearly raw and I found I couldn't eat it, I called the waitress over and reminded her about our conversation.

"I don't think the chef is going to like this," she said when I asked her to take it back.

I was astounded. Indeed, the waitress met with the maitre'd and several other waiters and waitresses and the maitre'd came over and explained that the chef had a bad temper and they would prefer if I ordered something else. By this time everyone else was pretty much finishing their main course and I said no, please have them cook it a little longer. Five minutes later they returned with my plate.

"He actually did it," the waitress said to me, showing me that it was now cooked medium to my satisfaction.

There was a time when I went to the opening of a restaurant to find myself sitting on the stolen furniture from another restaurant. It was back in the days when Al Salish was putting ten or eleven million dollars into the reconstruction of the Montauk Yacht Club restaurant. And now we were sitting in an outdoor patio at the grand opening of another restaurant located oceanfront between the Royal Atlantic and the Ocean Beach motels. The surf thundered about a hundred yards away and all ten of us at the table listened as Salish

Ice Fishermen

A Tribute To Those Men Who Hibernate Fourteen Years Then Come Out The Fifteenth

By Dan Rattiner

Three Mile Harbor has frozen over. It took three days of the wind howling and the temperature down in the teens to make the transformation. Yesterday it was choppy water. Today it is solid ice.

I've lived in this house on Three Mile Harbor for twenty-five years and I look down at the Harbor every day. This is the first time in fifteen years I've seen it turn to ice. I've got pictures taken fifteen years ago somewhere showing the harbor iced over. It used to happen with some frequency. Now we have global warming.

It won't be long now before the fishermen come out on the ice.

They will walk gingerly out, testing the ice as they go, they will chop holes in it with picks and shovels but they will not drop down fishing lines. Instead, they will push through the hole long poles with sharp stakes on the end. The poles will reach the harbor bottom and the fishermen will poke around until they stab an eel. The eel will wriggle this way and that, and the men, with great skill, will slowly pull the poles back up and out through the hole with the eel on the end. Then they will shake the eel off into a wooden box.

I've never seen an eel in the harbor before. I've seen clams and crabs and fish and jellyfish, even a sand shark, but then I've never looked down into the water in the harbor in the wintertime. The eels are there, I guess, maybe. Come to think of it, I've never seen an eel fisherman when the harbor isn't frozen over either.

Maybe the eel fishermen are specialists, staying home collecting unemployment year after year occasionally looking wistfully out the window into the harbor, then turning and flopping down on the couch again.

"Nope. No ice yet. Anybody see the remote?"

The eel fishermen work fewer hours than anybody else in the world. Just a few days, once every fifteen years. And as global warming settles in, less and less.

So here they are again, one more time. The eels are stabbed and brought to the surface. The fisherman put the eels in boxes and carry them to their cars alongside the harbor to put them in the backseat, the contents thumping away.

They take them home and sell them to the fancy restaurants. You get eel and lentil soup, eel salad nicoise, eel tartare with mustard sauce appetizer, baked eel in peppercorns, eel pie with a scoop of ice cream – vanilla or eel. Yum. •

ICE CREAM, BASEBALL AND TELEPHONES CAN HURT

By Dan Rattiner

News Item: In public playgrounds around the country, jungle gyms are being dismantled and thrown away. They may have been safe enough for grownups when they were kids. They are not considered safe enough for the politically correct kids of today.

It is interesting that, with the banning of the jungle gym, the powers that be are for the first time beginning to look at things invented before the advent of political correctness. This is a very nasty rock that they have just turned over. Here are some of the other worms, along with the dates they were invented. Note that they preceeded political correctness and so seemed pretty good at the time.

Who knew?

BASEBALL. (1839) Every time the pitcher throws a ball, everyone is in danger. I am not talking just about the batter, who is forced to deal with a cowhide covered sphere whizzing just next to him at speeds of up to 100 miles an hour. I am talking about the catcher, the umpire and everybody else on the field. There have been cases of high fly balls lost in the sun, shortstops who were thinking of something else when a line drive came at them, even the pitcher, who can get hit by the sharp end of a broken bat before he is even done with his follow through.

Then there are people in the stands. These people are in the stands to enjoy the game. Many of them have had too many beers to drink. Practically none of them has had instruction on what to do if a foul ball comes to them on a line. Baseball is an accident waiting to happen. And, often, it does.

THE TELEPHONE. (1876) This is one of the stupidest ideas ever invented. You come home from a hard day's work, lie down on the living room sofa to take a little nap, and just before, in your dream, you are about to bring in the winning million dollar lottery ticket there is a loud jangling noise and you sit bolt upright. Your hands are shaking, your eyes have not yet focused and you are bathed with sweat. And then the loud jangling noise comes again and you pick it up and it's someone calling to tell you the bank did not receive your mortgage payment.

It is true there are all sorts of things on the market to soften this reality. There is call waiting, there are answering machines, there is caller ID.

held forth. He began lamenting the fact that the man he had hired to keep track of all the old furniture being removed from the yacht club, had reported it stolen. I looked down at the table and then at the chair in which I was sitting and the chairs that all the others were sitting on and realized they were Al's property. I didn't say a word.

A well-known abstract expressionist painter hangs out at the Peconic Coast restaurant in East Hampton. He used to hang out at Nick and Toni's where he had a favorite table, but he had a run in with management he told me.

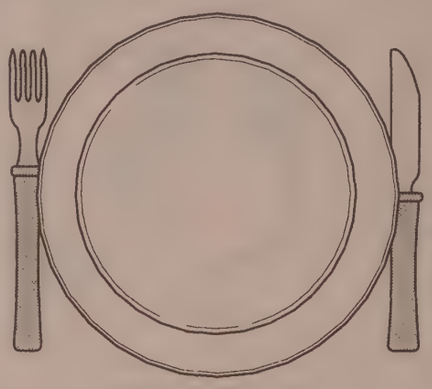
"I called to make a reservation one day, I always made reservations and they told me they were booked. I called a few days later and they were still booked. When this happened a third time," he said, "I knew something was wrong. I went there without a reservation and was told by the maitre 'd, that apparently I had said that I would like to see a wider variety on the menu to one of the people I was eating with. I was amazed, one, that they would eavesdrop on my conversation and two, that since I was a regular, I might note that I was eating the same thing over and over and that this would offend them. I asked to speak to the owner, and got an audience with him and he apologized but the truth is that when I next called to make a reservation, they put me all the way in the back rather than at my regular table, which was empty. I decided that we had moved into a new relationship and I have moved myself to the Peconic Coast."

Who eats at restaurants is indeed a matter for the management to decide. About seven years-ago, the wife of the owner of Basilico in Southampton gave an interview with a reporter from a local paper about how well they were doing and how happy they were to be serving the community and how they were a fine restaurant with a fine clientele.

"Of course, we don't serve just anybody," she said, not realizing what she was getting herself into. "For example there are the people from Westhampton Beach. If they call, we're always full. We don't want those people here."

"How do you know they're from Westhampton?" The reporter asked.

"We ask for their phone number. If it's 288 we know they're from Westhampton."



These comments created such an uproar that the owner of Basilico had to apologize publicly and issue a denial at which he suggested that his wife had misspoken.

Without a doubt though, the restaurant that has created the most controversy about its patron practices is the American Hotel in Sag Harbor. It's not the restaurant so much as it is the owner, Ted Conklin, who for thirty years has insisted that people dress appropriately for the formal occasion of eating in his place, one of the finest on the East End. I have on occasion been phoned here at the newspaper by irate persons who say that Conklin has discriminated against them because of their race, religion, creed or sexual preference, but the bottom line always is what they wore and how they behaved. Once for example, a man wrote a letter to us complaining that he was thrown out of the American Hotel in spite of having a reservation because Mr. Conklin objected to the fact that he didn't have hair on his head. I didn't publish this letter because I know Conklin and what he stands for which, I agree, with but this letter did appear in another paper eliciting a letter in response from the restaurateur.

"It wasn't the lack of hair on his head that I objected to," Conklin wrote, "but it was the profusion of it under his arms, clearly visible to everyone. He was in my hotel wearing an undershirt with nothing over it."

Well, all this talk about restaurants has made me hungry. Anybody know an Indonesian restaurant in the Hamptons that I can call to deliver a baked chicken and peanut sauce with refried shrimp and rice to my house without giving me an argument? •

Puffy And The Hampty-Hamps

How Will The Hamptons Regard Puff Daddy When Summer Comes Around?

By Dan Rattiner

I was eavesdropping on the couple at the next table the other day. They were talking about rap mogul Puffy Combs who lives in the northwest section of East Hampton. "Well, I guess he'll be going back to L.A.," The woman was saying. "He's not going to be welcomed back in the Hamptons any more."

"Oh, yes he will," the man said.

"I'll bet you ten dollars," the woman said. They shook hands on it.

This conversation happened on Friday. The day before, Puffy Combs was indicted for gun possession, a crime punishable by five years in jail, after being driven in his limo from East Hampton, to Club NY on 43rd Street, where he found himself in attendence for a gun fight in which three people were injured. Combs, who Forbes magazine has estimated is worth a little over $250 million, has hired two high powered lawyers to defend him, one of whom is Johnny Cochran, the defender of O.J. Simpson. Whether it is related or not, I don't know. Shortly after that, Combs put on the market a twelve story apartment building he owns on Park Avenue and 77th Street worth about fourteen million dollars. Cochran isn't cheap.

Will Hamptonites graciously accept invitations to Puffy Combs' house this coming summer? It's an interesting question because it will help define what behavior is or is not acceptable to the wealthy denizens who occupy this place. I think if O.J. Simpson were to buy a house in the Hamptons and invite people over for a party, nobody would come. Simpson is connected with a very violent crime. On the other hand, if Michael Milken bought a place out here – and Milkin's shenanigans with junk bonds in the 1980's probably caused the crash of 1989 – he would probably be welcomed with open arms. In fact, I know he would. He's been out here visiting friends in the past and people were fighting to be on the "A List" to see him.

So the rule seems to be if you do something bad involving money than it's OK, but, if you do something bad involving violence, than it's not OK.

Puffy Combs falls somewhere in the middle. Well, not exactly in the middle. He's gone from rags to riches in a perfectly legal manner, running a record company with a number of smash hits (including his own) providing lots of excitement and entertainment in the music business. As for violent stuff, he's never been actually convicted of any, but seems to either attract it or be found around it. He was involved in a physical beating of a rap mogul named Steve Stoute. He was a good friend of the Notorious Biggie Smalls who was shot to death, some say in reprisal for the shooting death of Tupac, another rapper out in Los Angeles. He's been connected with rapper Jay-Z who is facing fifteen years in prison for allegedly knifing a rival and now he has been arrested along with a young rapper named Shyne Barrow who allegedly opened fire in the night club while he was sitting next to Puffy Combs. Here in the Hamptons Puffy's been seen with the likes of Donald Trump, Donna Karan, Ivana Trump, Martha Stewart and of course, his girlfriend Jennifer Lopez. He is a rags to riches story who has earned over two hundred million legitimate dollars and he swings a lot of weight out here, even if some of the people he hangs with refer to our area as the "Hampty-Hamps."

It is interesting to note how Hampton society dealt with other well-known people who have had brushes with very bad behavior. For instance, there was Jeanne Harris, the prep school head mistress who murdered her lover, Dr. Herman Tarnower. This was more than just a brush with bad behavior. She took a loaded gun, went into the bedroom and shot him in his sleep and served a long term in prison. When she appeared out here in the Hamptons however, society in these parts em-

PUFFY'S STORY

By Jerry Cimisi

Sean (Puffy) Combs, a.k.a. Puff Daddy, was another newly arrived Hamptonite who brought success, fame and money out to East Hampton, threw parties (like his "All White" end of summer party that seemed right out of something from the old guard) that attracted the likes of Martha Stewart and Ivana Trump. He was combining fantastic careers, not only an award-winning rapper, but a record company mogul. And he was not yet thirty years old.

Puffy had risen from an unpaid internship at Uptown Records to vice president at the age of nineteen. In 1993 he had founded his own company, Bad Boy Records. By 1997, braced her. Her sentence was behind her, she had done a lot of good work while in prison, and there may have been a lot of undertones of hero worship from many female Hamptonites who kind of thought that the Tarnower murder was somehow justified. The man was cheating on her, for God's sakes.

Another person who has had remarkable acceptance in the Hamptons is an art dealer by the name of Crispo. A young man who was murdered was discovered buried in a fresh grave under Crispo's lawn in Southampton and there were rumors that he had been shot as part of a snuff movie. Crispo survived a grand jury investigation for involvement in that murder but later got convicted for tax evasion. Also, his house exploded, caught fire and burned down. None of these transgressions hurt him that much.

Barry Trupin, who started construction on what was going to be a giant French chateau on the beach in Southampton, did not make out nearly as well. Some said Southampton society rejected him because of latent Anti-Semitism, but then there were other stories. Trupin had made his millions early in the Reagen Administration by taking advantage of an extraordinary tax loophole he stumbled upon. He'd get, as an example, executives from United Parcel Service and the Ford Motor Company in the same room. Both companies owned fleets of vehicles that in theory could be used as tax deductions, but if Ford were having a bad year and United Parcel Service a good year, Ford wouldn't be able to take advantage of the tax deduction and it would be lost. Trupin would arrange to have Ford sell its fleet of trucks to United Parcel Service which would then lease the trucks back to Ford. Then the Ford tax deduction could be used by United Parcel Service. United Parcel Service, Ford and Trupin would share in this little shuffling of paper and the losers would be the government, i.e. the taxpayers. Trupin later got involved in a savings and loan scandal, and sometime after that was indicted for tax invasion. He now resides in Canada, his never completed castle on the beach long since sold.

Another character also not accepted by Southampton society in the 1970's was a young millionaire named Roy Radin. In his late twenties, Radin made a fortune by having telephone sales people around the country call merchants in their home towns and in a thug-like voice, ask for money for a local upcoming event that would benefit the P.B.A. The P.B.A., the Police Benevolent Association, did benefit from the event, at least to a certain extent. As for the merchants, they got advertisements in programs printed up for a few hundred people attending the event. They also came to believe by the tone of voice of the sales people (who were not connected with any police department) that they would not receive first class police protection unless they bought the ads. The practice was soon ordered stopped by a state district attorney.

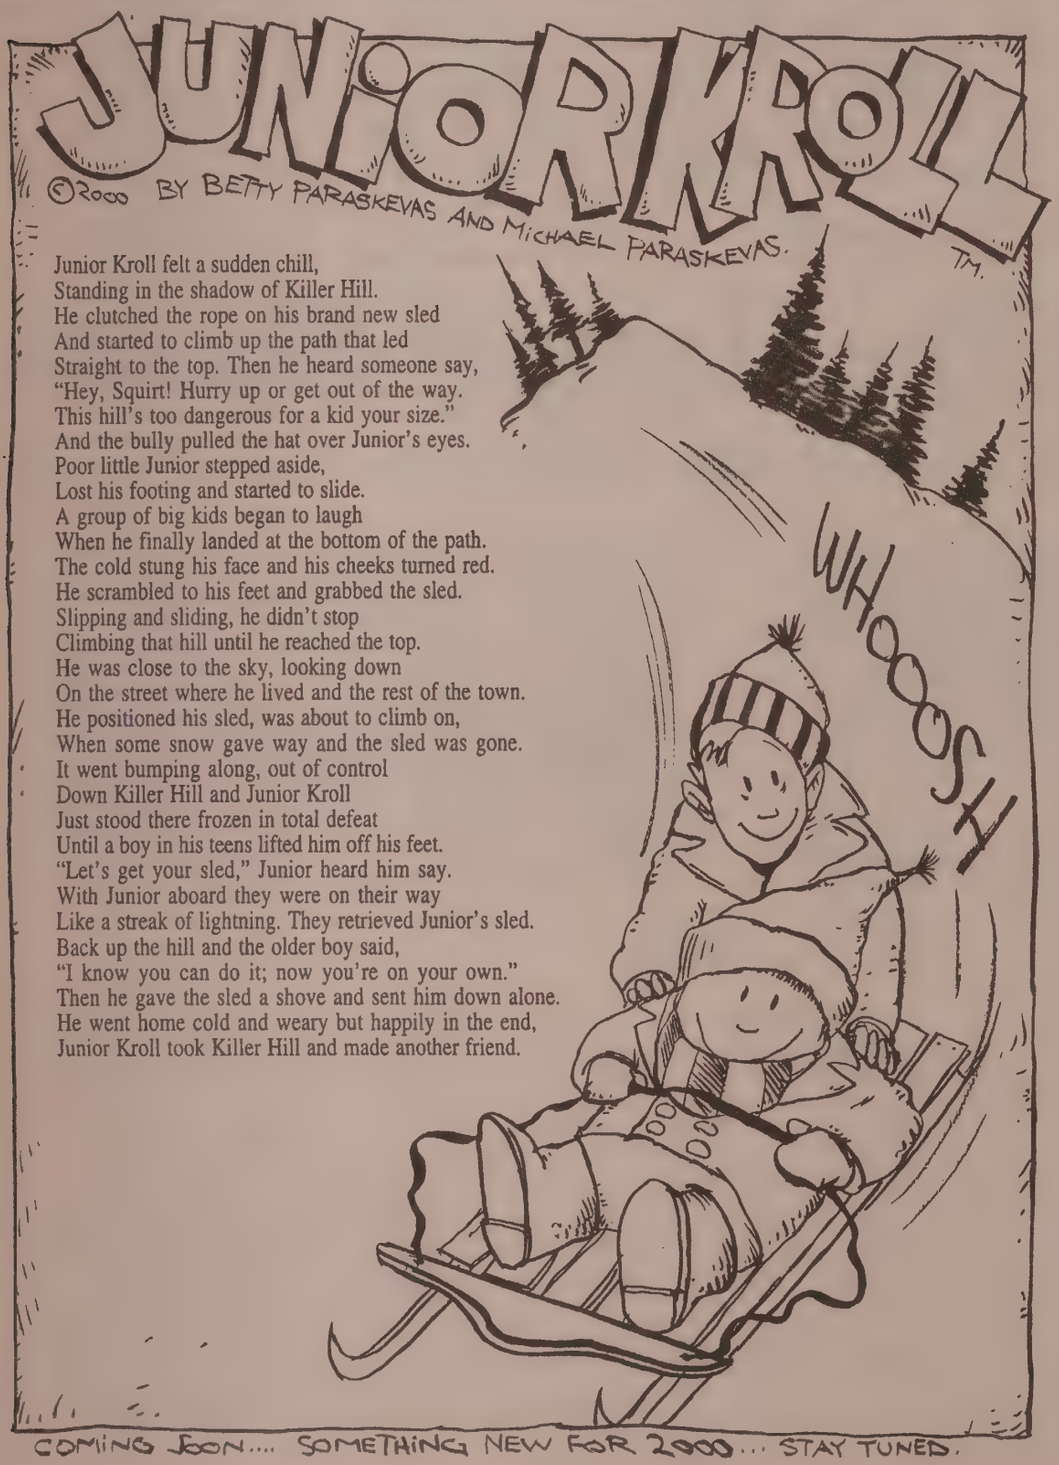
When Radin was twenty-nine years old, he was often seen on Main Street, Southampton wearing a black cape and sporting a cane with a silver handle. He was a very heavyset man, about six feet tall and three hundred pounds and soon it turned out that he was holding very erotic parties out as his beach mansion. There were handcuffs, videotapes, whips and chains, waterbeds, masks and all sorts of other paraphernalia and the parties had been going on for years, right under the noses of the police. It was only after a Hollywood model was found dazed and incoherent on a Long Island Railroad train headed for Manhattan at three o'clock in the morning that the police raided Raden's house and arrested him on gun charges. The parties stopped.

A year later, Radin flew to California to arrange to invest in the upcoming movie The Cotton Club and disappeared. His body was found by a park ranger two months after that in a dry canyon outside of Los Angeles with a bullet in his head.

What does all this mean? Well, the tally is I guess, murder-no, tax evasion-yes, murder when a woman is wronged-yes, wild sex parties-no.

Also, there may be a variable, depending on whether the fortune of the individual is thirty million instead of three hundred million. Perhaps a sliding scale.

As for Puffy Combs, we'll have to see. Personally, I think, the only real clear cut crimes in the Hamptons are building a house blocking the ocean view of a neighbor and taking a parking space a split second faster than somebody already backing into it. Oh, and maybe sneaking ahead with a restaurant reservation. •



JUNIOR KROLL
©2000 BY BETTY PARASKEVAS AND MICHAEL PARASKEVAS. TM.
Junior Kroll felt a sudden chill,
Standing in the shadow of Killer Hill.
He clutched the rope on his brand new sled
And started to climb up the path that led Straight to the top. Then he heard someone say,
"Hey, Squirt! Hurry up or get out of the way.
This hill's too dangerous for a kid your size."
And the bully pulled the hat over Junior's eyes.
Poor little Junior stepped aside,
Lost his footing and started to slide.
A group of big kids began to laugh
When he finally landed at the bottom of the path.
The cold stung his face and his cheeks turned red.
He scrambled to his feet and grabbed the sled.
Slipping and sliding, he didn't stop
Climbing that hill until he reached the top.
He was close to the sky, looking down
On the street where he lived and the rest of the town.
He positioned his sled, was about to climb on,
When some snow gave way and the sled was gone.
It went bumping along, out of control
Down Killer Hill and Junior Kroll
Just stood there frozen in total defeat
Until a boy in his teens lifted him off his feet.
"Let's get your sled," Junior heard him say.
With Junior aboard they were on their way
Like a streak of lightning. They retrieved Junior's sled.
Back up the hill and the older boy said,
"I know you can do it; now you're on your own."
Then he gave the sled a shove and sent him down alone.
He went home cold and weary but happily in the end,
Junior Kroll took Killer Hill and made another friend.

Is January Over?

Here, Under The Bed, I Can't Tell, Is It Safe To Come Out Now?

By Janet Berg

December was a whirlwind of fun and excitement. And January is the month we pay for it. It is the month we try to redeem our wrongs; it is when we are reminded of our overindulgences. It is the opposite of the positive spirit of the month preceding it, as we find ourselves heading back to the stores; this time without the glory. This is time for the "R" word – returns. I had to go to nine (count them) different locations with returns, none of which were a lot of fun. I've decided it is a terrible month, and I am going around with a petition to ban it.

On my visit to a department store, I found out that everything was drastically marked down, up to seventy-five percent. I could see why. The clothes looked as if they had been through a world war. In a way they had been; I could still see some footprints on the pile of garments that perhaps 3,000 disgruntled shoppers trampled through. When I was offered a mere $14 for a $57 sweater (one), I told her, "It's okay, just keep it."

The hassles went from the ridiculous to the extreme. My dog's gift didn't fit around her neck (two). I didn't know they made "irregular" dog collars. Ha-ha. That's funny. But I couldn't laugh when we had to pay $4000 for our irregular computer to be Ha-ha, Y2K ready for our family business.

The troubles really all began with the decorating. I tried to be content with my purchases, honestly. I bought the iceicles that every other house on the block has. I got the white wooden reindeer for the lawn that have a mind of their own – they insist on lying down rather than grazing. I even got the "Rock and Roll Santa," but it was defective. He rocked, but he didn't roll, as his butt sort of just jutted out to one side and vibrated.

He went back (three).

Being a sucker for gimmicks, I couldn't resist the talking picture frame. You insert a picture of a loved one in the frame, speak into it, and leave a ten second message. It would have worked out fine, if the film department hadn't lost my family photo and replaced it with a stranger's picture.

"Oh, what the heck," I thought.

I left a message anyway. You should have seen my family's face when my husband opened his gift and saw the little girl looking back and him, saying, "Daddy, you don't know about me, but I'm the daughter you never knew you had... (four)."

My fifth return was a camcorder to a very popular appliance store. As I recall, the young whippersnapper behind the counter intimidated me into buying an extended warranty. "You should extend the manufacturer's warranty by purchasing our "Peace of Mind" service protection plan," he rehearsed.

"Oh, I thought it is automatically under warranty," I replied.

But he threatened, "That warranty is only for thirty days, and if you should need labor or new parts, it can get veeeery expensive."

He scared me into recounting my cash. "Okay, Okay," I said.

"This is returnable, isn't it? If my husband doesn't want it?"

"Sure," he answered, "Just as long as the seal on the box isn't broken."

"O-oh," I stuttered, after the register was permanently sealed with my money in it. "You mean, my husband can't even "look" at it?

"Not if you want your $500 back," he answered in a matter of fact tone. Otherwise you'll have to use store credit." (Store credit? How much more could I buy? I already have two cameras and a television).

The day after Christmas, on December 26, my husband and I returned to this big chain store with our "sealed" box and attempted to return the camcorder and get our money back.

"Unfortunately," the young clerk told us, "Our store policy doesn't allow us to return cash to the customer."

"What?" I bellowed. "But I gave you cash."

"I know," he said, but we don't carry that much money in the store." (I looked around the mega-sized store, with refrigerators, ovens, washers and dryers, big-screen TV's, computers, and many electronic devices and looked back at the clerk). "We will mail you a check and you'll have it within a week," he said in an Eddie Haskell voice.

"Okay, no problem," I said, biting my tongue. (After all, it wasn't the kid's fault). But whose fault is it? Who's responsible anymore for anything? Parents aren't, businesses aren't, the police aren't, lawyers aren't, neighbors aren't, phone companies and oil companies aren't, voice mail and computers and...

On the way home we stopped at a fast food place (If you ask me, a little too fast) to get dinner. We were tired and hungry, so we went to the drive-thru window. I was familiar with their "voice muffler" so I spoke clearly; but when I got home and found three orders of supersize fries that I didn't order, I screamed, 'THAT DID IT!"

They can steal our car (which they did; our car was stolen a few days before Christmas). They can screw up our furniture order (which they did; the couch (six) didn't fit through our door on delivery, so they put it back on the truck). They can screw up our bank account (thank you very much); but no one messes with me when it comes to food.

I held on to those doggone french fries for two more days until one day on my lunch break I went for the big return (number seven). I was finally going to make someone do the right thing. I mean how do they sleep at night?

I walked into the Center Moriches branch. And I was friendly enough until the clerk had a smirk on her face while wearing that stupid looking uniform. "Problem?" she snorted.

"I just want to return these supersize french fries for something else because I did not order them." I didn't understand the big deal. I suddenly had this urge to stick one of the long fries up her nostril, but I controlled myself. "Do you have any idea how many burgers I've eaten from this establishment over the years?" I cried as I pointed wearily at her oversized arches – "MILLIONS, okay."

She gets out a black and white notebook, like the ones you bring to school and makes me repeat the gory details and asks for identification.

"Yes," I'm saying under my breath to myself, "I'm almost there, I'm almost home... Then she asks, "Which branch did you purchase the fries at?"

"I b-beg your pardon," I gasp. I keep my cool, however, and answer in morbid curiosity. Manorville?" I say, hoping I got the right answer.

"Manorville?" She started taking on a Lieutenant Colombo attitude now. "You can't return these fries here if you bought them in Manorville," she gloated.

"I can't?" I said. "Oh. Oh yeah, I got them here, in Center Moriches... yeah, that's right, I just remembered – that's my final freakin' answer."

She looked at me with daggers in her eyes. But, she had me. After all, my name is still in her black and white book. If she doesn't send me something ticking in the mail, she may tamper with my next burger. Maybe I'll go to the "other" fast food chain and forget the whole thing. I mean, she was scary with that hat and all.

Even on the first of January, on New Year's Eve, I was ready to give up.

I was looking forward to the end of the world. Even that didn't work out. We had invited friends over to watch a DVD movie with us, but they just didn't get it. And I thought Nostradamus would be a hit. Apparently our DVD was a DUD (eight).

Sometimes I feel like an "Out-of -Towner," like Jack Lemmon, standing helplessly on the pavement of a New York City street, taking names and numbers. What's wrong with society these days? Is everyone out to get everyone else? Is everyone competing, and outdoing, and taking advantage of the next guy?

What happened to good, old fashioned morals?

What happened to being happy with what we have? And when we're not happy, why can't we just return it? I'd like to return the month of January (number nine). •

Combs had produced – or performed in – forty percent of the number one hits for that year. In 1998 he won two Grammys and his birthday party later that year, attended by the doyenne of style Martha Stewart, was listed by The New York Times as one of the parties of the century. He also began a relationship with actress and singer Jennifer Lopez

For the Harlem-born Puffy Combs, whose father was shot and killed there when Puffy was two, the sky seemed the limit.

But Puffy kept doing things that brought him down, hard, to earth. In 1991, he was involved in promoting a charity basketball game at City College in Harlem. Nine people were killed, crushed to death, when a stampede occurred in the overcrowded gymnasium. Puffy was accused of overselling the event. No charges were filed against him.

In 1996, a whole lot of dissing between East Coast rappers and West Coast rappers, symbolized respectively by Puffy's Bad Boy label in New York and the Death Row label in Los Angeles, seem to be the unfortunate chorus to the murder of rapper Tupac Shakur. Puffy was suspected of having some connection to the slaying, but nothing could be proven against him.

The next year, 1997, when Puffy's success as record exec and performer was assured, his buddy Biggie Smalls was murdered in Las Vegas.

And then the fin de siecle year of 1999: In April, Puffy, in the throes of a religious tempering, wanted a segment of a video he has done excised. It was a scene of him being crucified. But record executive Steve Stoute with Interscope Records, a company involved in the video, wanted the scene to remain. Puffy hit Stoute over the head with a champagne bottle; it is caught by security cameras. Puffy's bodyguard hit Stoute with a chair. Puffy paid Stoute (reportedly to the tune of about a half million dollars) not to press charges. And after that, the Manhattan D.A.'s office, which could have pressed Stoute to testify against Combs or face obstruction of justice charges, did not do so. Puffy's punishment was a one day class in anger management.

Then came the early morning hours of December 27. Puffy Combs was hit with felony gun charges after a shooting at Club NY on West 43rd Street, right across from The New York Times. There had been a shooting at the bar.

But no matter what you do, this stuff gets through. And there's more. There are crank callers, there are bond salesmen, there are burglars calling to see if you are home. Alexander Graham Bell should have been burned at the stake. Or at least been made to answer the phone every fifteen minutes every night throughout the night for his entire adult life.

POWERLINES. (1900) Let me ask you something. What if I told you I wanted to string dangerous wires on all the roads around the country? They'll be like cobwebs. And if you looked out a window and had a beautiful view before now you'll look out a window and see all these cobwebs.

Another thing is that if one of these wires happen to break you'll be in big trouble. Don't touch one lying on the ground. Your hair will stand on end, your eyes will spin around in your head and all your skin will peel off. It's a horrible way to die. Best thing to do if there is a thunder and lightning storm or if a big truck comes weaving down the street that might crash into one of the wooden poles holding up these wires is to run inside and hide under the bed.

ICE CREAM. (1786) Ice cream has caused more hardening of the arteries, more heart attacks, more multiple bypasses and valve replacements than just about any food ever put onto the market. It is so good it is almost addictive. The more you eat the more you want. The more you want the more you eat.

Ice cream is a rich, thick dairy product high in cholesterol.

It is more fattening, portion by portion, than just about anything else you can eat. It creates obesity and obesity robs quality of life. Rejected.

GUNPOWDER. (Circa 1300) What I do here is push this ball down one end of this metal tube. I sprinkle some of this new stuff I call gunpowder in at the other end. I point it at your head. I light it. It blows your head off. Yes, this will definitely help us tame the savage tribes of America and Africa. The Chinese will be so terrified they will run away.

How will we keep this sprinkle stuff secret? Simple. We'll hide the formula under this rock here.

CABLE TELEVISION. (1973) Before cable television, generations of youths grew up watching movies, listening to the radio and watching the networks where Crime Doesn't Pay, where The Shadow Knows What Evil Lurks in the Minds of Men and where in the end the hero always gets the girl. Before cable television, the Ten Commandments guided us. Violate the Ten Commandments, experience the punishment. Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother, Do Not Covet Thy Neighbor's Wife and Mow the Lawn every two weeks whether it needed it or not and all good things would come to you. With the advent of Cable Television, all the gloves came off the fists. We have six year olds who can describe to you in graphic detail oral sex, sex with a sheep and various other sorts of sodomy. We have five year olds watching the heroine of Crocodile Dundee sniff a white powder up her nose through a straw and who can give you a complete rundown of various drugs available in this country and their probable effects. And all of it brought to your living room because of the doors opened by cable television.

FOOTBALL. (1875) Approximately ten percent of all the kids who suit up into uniforms for high school or college football wind up with injuries to their knees, elbows, shoulders or heads. These are unacceptable odds.

THE AUTOMOBILE. (1885) People drive down the road at fifty miles an hour with just a little white line separating them. Dotted line means its safe to cross if nobody is coming, solid line means it is our judgement you can't see well enough to judge whether anything is coming so don't try it. What is it that psychologists have determined keeps you from drifting over the white line (well, there are exceptions) for a head-on collision? Self preservation. Of course, if you fall asleep at the wheel you'll wind up hitting SOMETHING although luck of the draw is that it will just as likely be standing still as coming at you. Forty-five thousand people a year get killed driving automobiles in the United States every year. That is more than 100 a day. Yes, cars get you there. But who dreamt this up?

SWINGS. (Antiquity) It is hard to imagine how any responsible member of a Board of Education, focusing on jungle gyms, could walk right past the swings without ordering them banned too. Stick your hand out while swinging and you can get it caught between the swing and the metal pole holding it up.

Swing up too high and you can get thrown off, tossed high in the air and dashed to the ground. There are lots of scrapes, bruises and bumps, even concussions, associated with swings.

If they were just invented as a new toy they would be a scandal, the maker hounded into bankruptcy for putting something on the market that can injure children. And for what?

SEESAWS. (Circa 450 B.C.) The thing about seesaws are that they teach you to trust your fellow human beings. When a kid heavier than you forces you up and then jumps off, you come crashing to the ground (concussion, broken wrist, fright, sprained ankle). The thing about seesaws is that they teach you the Second Law of Thermodynamics which is never seesaw with somebody heavier than you.

Anybody have any more ideas on things to ban? It's a big world out there. Everybody knows it's not safe to get out of bed anymore. And isn't that a Murphy Bed? One of those things they invented that can pin a person right to a wall? •

Puffy's Story

Three people were shot. Two men had shoulder wounds and a woman was hit in the nose – or merely grazed, depending on accounts. One account has it that Puffy didn't fire a gun but pulled it out to hold others at bay.

One of Bad Boys' up and coming performers, Jamal Barrow, known in the business as Shyne, was charged with three counts of attempted murder. Combs' driver, Wardel Fenderson and a bodyguard, Anthony (Wolf) Jones, were also arrested. Jones had previously served time for shooting at a policeman.

Jennifer Lopez was detained by police for twelve hours then released, with no charges against her.

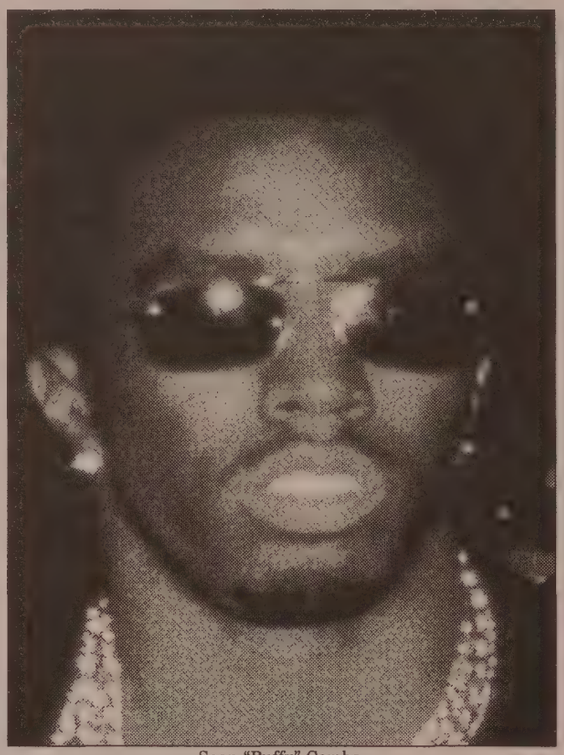
Barrow was arrested by two officers on foot patrol as he left the club, in possession of a gun. Then Puffy and Lopez left in a Lincoln Navigator with the police in pursuit. Puffy and his fleeing entourage ran through no less than eleven red lights. Eyewitnesses on the street say a gun was thrown out of the Navigator.

When the vehicle finally stopped, police found a gun in the car. Combs, Lopez, the driver Fenderson and the bodyguard Jones all denied owning the gun.

Bail for Combs was set at $10,000, a pittance for a man with a quarter of a billion dollars.

It later turned out that the guns were stolen. One was a 9mm semiautomatic Smith & Wesson 915 that was found beneath one of the seats of the Navigator, the other, recovered on the street, was also a Smith & Wesson 915.

As the high powered attorneys move in to protect Combs and Lopez, Fenderson gets his own lawyer and the story was leaked to the press that Combs asked the driver to tell police the gun was his.



Sean "Puffy" Combs

On January 13, Combs was indicted, along with bodyguard Anthony (Wolf) Jones with second and third degree criminal possession of a weapon. These charges indicate that both men were not only in possession of the guns but intended to use them. Manhattan D.A. Morganthau said both weapons had been fired.

Barrow was indicted on attempted murder charges. Combs maintains his innocence. Attorney Johnny Cochran of "If it don't fit you must acquit," fame, was hired by Combs.

Combs could get up to fifteen years in prison. His driver, Wardel Fenderson, was not indicted, and there is reasonable speculation he offered testimony to the Grand Jury.

Accounts have been leaked to the press that the fracas started when someone at the bar dissed Combs, who, along with Barrow, pulled out semiautomatics, with Barrow firing.

There is little doubt, of course, that the Hamptons Old Guard, perhaps best symbolized by the venerable Ladies Village Improvement Society of East hampton, that bastion of "The Most Beautiful Village in America," who makes sure flowers are up to par on Main Street and tends to ailing elms, hadn't thought much of Puff Daddy in the first place.

One also suspects the retired army colonel,

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Quinn

Observations of a New Islander #89
The KISS Principle

The KISS Principle stands for "Keep It Simple Stupid." A few hours after my marriage officially ended, I cried my eyes out in the car and went to a bookstore. I bought two books. One was Starting Over: Meditations for Divorced Women by Sue Ellen Stern. I recommend this for any woman going through a divorce. It kept me sane. I've re-read it so many times I've worn out half the words. The second book I bought was called Simple Abundance by Sarah Ban Breathnach. A fantastic book for women about getting back to basics.

But, if one book on simplifying your life is good, hey, two must be better! So I bought a second book on simplifying my life that agreed with the first book. Both say the first thing you do to simplify your life is to decrease your possessions. I now have about four books on simplifying my life and I can report that they all agree you start by eliminating things you own before they own you. And don't be a nitwit and buy duplicates of anything you already have.

Just to be sure I really understood the simplicity principals, I went to a wonderful class on Simplicity at our local Presbyterian Church. I bought my fifth book on simplicity for the class. I was delighted, after purchasing five books with the same content, I was definitely getting the hang of simplifying my life. For six weeks I sat with a group of intelligent, beautiful, mature women. There's an old saying, "Better to remain silent and let them think ye a fool, than to speak and remove all doubt." I wish very much that I'd read that saying before taking that class...

This week, with the assistance of my brother, we pulled out all my storage boxes and I once again triaged my possessions. I was determined to let go of more stuff. Holding up a very expensive teal colored coat with a cashmere blend zip-out lining, my brother said, "Okay, this is a size fourteen, Sissy, when was the last time you wore a size fourteen?"

"Ah, c'mon David, I still got a leg that's a fourteen..."

"Nope. Goodies Section," he announced ruthlessly.

The Goodies Section, the place at our local Dump where we leave usable items for someone else. My red wool coat from I. Magnin had to go. My last two muu-muus from Liberty House in Honolulu. Not much call for full length flowing dresses with giant red hibiscuses on Shelter Island, I suppose... my one remaining cup from Kahuku Sugar Mills... my favorite Sweet Adeline costume with the polka dot sleeves and red sequin cuffs... my favorite unused cookbook, Organic Cooking... a burgundy eelskin wallet that no longer holds all I need but I've kept it because it was too expensive to give away. Expensive duvet covers and flannels sheets that are no longer my taste, but I hung onto them because they were expensive. I realized I was hanging onto an awful lot of stuff just because I paid a lot for it, not because I needed it.

I finally got the lesson. If it isn't beautiful, useful or sentimental, get rid of it. I gave up a lot of things I have dragged through the past five house moves. I kept all the boxes of pictures. I kept my children's writing materials. I kept the fine china that I bought from Neiman-Marcus in San Antonio when I was nineteen, and still love. I kept things I adore, cheap or expensive. And I found the courage to let go of almost everything else, cheap or expensive.

I am however, keeping the Sweet Adeline costume. I was a member for a long time. I've fed my kids steadily through the years and I notice they have been aging rapidly. Any day now I should be able to leave them for one evening a week. I should be able to return home without finding that my daughter has left her little brother in a body bag on the front step.

Part of simplifying your life is getting yourself to do something you love to do. Soon my back will be killing me from standing too long on rickety risers. I'll be wearing a fringed, sequined dress, inappropriate for any occasion, and garish even for my taste, Early American Bordello. I'll be cursing the woman who chose the competition shoes from hell, rubbing vaseline on my teeth, and swearing I'll beat up the entire lead section if they force the basses any lower. Yes, it's hard to imagine such joy exists...

MON-TALK with Ingrid Lemme

I am a "Why me?" victim! No really, it is not funny! The most unfortunate things are happening to me and I wonder sometimes if it is really normal? You see it doesn't matter if I go to the bank; the post office or I try to check out with my groceries. When it's my turn the person in front of me can't find his checkbook, credit cards, money or there are other problems. "Why me?" That is exactly what I thought when ambulance husband called me at work to warn me that we had run out of heating oil, the house was cold and he would have to stand by a fire-call. Lucky him, at least a fire is warm, isn't it? And guess what? That very night was the coldest in his fifty plus years. Robbie Lucas actually froze to a ladder, can you believe it?

We live in a country house on Old Montauk Highway and we like to be in control of our oil bill, HAH, at least until last frozen Friday. Let me mention, that I had warned price-control-husband a couple of times of the possibility of an oil crash! However, to make a long story short, it was Friday evening, a weekend, country house was cold, ice-cold to be accurate. Sure I called Hardy Oil right away, you know they have that twenty-four hour service program and they even service on weekends and very important holidays. Erika's friendly, warm voice understood the seriousness of my problem, and asked me to hold the cold fort for an hour or so and help would be on the way. I found mountain husband's old fur hat, his size fourteen fur-lined-shoes, took my duvet covers and got dressed. I tried to read my e-mail and rubbed my nose and cheeks periodically to keep the circulation going. An hour passed and I became more certain that the service man couldn't find the house. Cold it was, lousy cold, and we all know who's getting the blame for it! I called Erica again.

She was patient, and understanding my extraordinaryly icy condition, explained that "Boomer" was on the way, still troubleshooting his way to country house. The mountain-fur-hat has long earlaps and I tied them under my chin, boy it was cold. A bath, a nice bath would do it! Why didn't I think about that earlier? The water was cold, ice cold. Did you know that there is a fair chance, that when there is no heat, there is no hot water either? Our bed, why didn't I think about that?

Dressed in the fur hat, the fur-lined shoes, and the blanket I crept under the king size pillows. Bacon, my kitten, wanted to cuddle; terrific, my hands were freezing, and she took off. Finally, "Boomer" arrived and he looked like a bank robber in his ski mask which left only holes for his eyes. He loved my mountain-Man-of La Mancha donkey-saddle-blanket look and grinned. Boomer has seen it all. He filled up the tank, reset the boiler and explained that a refill contract would eliminate these unwanted polar excursions.

How wonderful, when we come home from the Hansel & Gretel Opera, which the Montauk is presenting in the Community Church to support the "Montauk Playhouse Project," country house will be warm and cozy. The Playhouse was promised half a million dollars by an unnamed donor, with the provision that it can be matched within a certain time frame. Donations are so very welcome. Is there anybody out there who has too much money? "Why not me?"

–Love Ingrid

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO
"Jane Pauley And Willard Scott"
January 16, 1985

When you get up at six thirty in the morning as I do, you get to know the TV personalities that haunt the airwaves at that hour.

On CBS, for example, there is the Morning Show with Bill Kurtis and Phyllis George Brown. ABC has Good Morning America with David Hartman, but my favorite is NBC which has an early morning news program called The Today Show.

Second string anchorlady on this show is a woman named Connie Chung.

She is a super looking Asian American lady, very intelligent and personable, and you've got to believe that on any other network, she'd be the main anchor. On NBC, however, she runs second to Jane Pauley, who comes across as the most supersensitive, vulnerable, intelligent, inquisitive, beautiful, wonderful person around. Jane Pauley is absolutely sensational. For a month there, she was off the show and I missed her. Then she came back on and I learned she'd given birth to twins. Terrific.

Moving up as one of the personalities on this network is a weatherman named Willard Scott. Willis, as they call him, is six foot three, big and jolly with a kind of booming voice. He looks and acts like a grown up kid, and very often he holds up various gifts he receives, things like bags of potato chips from Maui, or a basket of apples from Oregon. A very likable hale fellow well met.

All of this, of course, is exactly what the NBC network would like me to report. In the old days, you may recall, these anchor people just sat there and reported the news. Huntley and Brinkley and Cronkite were not exactly bubbling over with personality. But beginning about five years ago, the network realized that their ratings went up if the anchor people exhibited human characteristics, a sense of humor, or a certain amount of byplay. People in the business I know call it the pushing and shoving style of reporting the news.

In any case, on a Wednesday morning just after the turn of the New Year, I saw some byplay between Jane Pauley and Willard Scott that was most definitely not in the script. I mention it here, because it makes you realize just how little we know about these so-called "personalities." TV scripts, apparently, can do wonders.

The hour had just started, and, sitting at the main anchor desk were Jane Pauley and Willard Scott. This is the usual spot for Pauley, but it is not so usual for Willard. He usually stands around by the weather map. Occasionally, however, he will come over and sit down if the main anchor, Bryant Gumble, is not there at the moment. Jane said hello to Willard. Willard gave a big friendly hello to Jane. Then, he leaned toward her, and quite unconsciously I am sure, placed his hand on her forearm and gave it a little squeeze. He did not stop the squeeze however, he just kept his hand right there on her arm as both he and Jane bantered back and forth.

After only a few seconds, it became quite apparent to me that Jane Pauley was becoming uncomfortable with this hand on her arm. She and Willard kept on talking and when Willard would make a point, he seemed to squeeze the arm a little harder for a moment.

What it reminded me of was this certain kind of man who just goes around all the time squeezing women. These men, usually large and bear-like, give hugs, pinch cheeks, pats on the bottom, squeezes on the arms. As far as they are concerned, what they are doing is just kind of checking things out and they do it at parties, at dinners, at the office, absolutely anywhere, even in front of their own wives. Occasionally, I think, somebody gets offended by their behavior and says something, but usually, this kind of touching is just below the level where anybody might mention it. In fact, from the toucher's point of view, it is probably a wholly innocent occupation.

In this case, Jane Pauley who is most certainly a small and slender woman – perhaps a third the size of big Willard Scott – was clearly intimidated by what was going on. She was also, I believe, horrified that this was happening on nationwide network TV. Carefully, she inched her arm in closer to her body, hoping that Willis would get the message and bug off. He didn't. She pulled closer and then he did pull away. But then, in a moment, making some other newsworthy point, he was back, to give the forearm one final squeeze, before removing it for good.

I think I saw a part of Willard Scott's real personality I was never supposed to see. It has altered my opinion of him somewhat. I think Jane Pauley probably would like to like Willard but can't bring herself to do so. And I think the ratings are going to go up because those who saw this, like me, are going to continue to tune in to see what happens next. –Dan Rattiner

Puffy's neighbor, didn't much care for Mr. Combs. The good colonel sat by his driveway, in a lawn chair, making sure the chic – or grungy – guests at Puffy's early summer party did not park in his driveway. He chased away Ivana Trump. When asked if he knew who that woman was, his reply was in the nature of Clark Gable's famous parting line, that he didn't give a damn.

There is, of course, a lot of new blood and money in the Hamptons. Where WASP money once ruled, and still, to some degree holds its own, there are lawyers, executives and entrepreneurs who made their bundle in the past fifteen years – and many of them are from minority groups.

If time does prove Puffy innocent it's one thing, but if not it's another. Will Puffy be invited to polo? Southampton Hospital's summer benefit? Of course, Mr. Combs, could buy the hospital, or at least he could throw in enough millions to get it out of its financial woes.

In fact, something of that nature could be Puffy's ticket. Look at John D. Rockefeller, exploiter of the proletariet, who became a venerated philanthropist. It is not unrealistic to imagine the beleaguered rapper, fresh from beating the rap, say, using a paltry million here and there to garner for himself some respect. For instance, he could contribute to the Bridgehampton School's expansion, a move whose finances were voted down by the electorate twice last year.

The French say the more things change the more they remain the same. Sean (Puffy) Combs, may find that scandal even enhances the allure of his considerable fortune. The "Hampty-Hamps" could still welcome him. He may have to leave his Smith & Wesson at the door, though. •

This is my first column of the new millennium and an opportunity to wish all my readers, those I photographed and those I poke some fun at, a wonderful, healthy, and fulfilling year. I just returned from China, traveling to Beijing, Xian, and Guilin, and I have spared you from seeing my photos and listening to my stories. I also went to Bali, where I heard of a party that had lots of Hamptons people but could not hook up with the organizers. I would have enjoyed covering an event on the flip side of the world. So let me know when there are events–you never know.

Resolution Solutions – New Year, New Look

By Allison Wiley

It happens with the dawning of each New Year. "This year I'm going to lose ten pounds and keep it off." "I'm going to create a new look for myself." " I'm going to learn to speak French." "Find a new job." "Write my memoirs." You know how it goes. And you know what they say about best intentions. So, to help you to stay on course and fulfill your resolutions this year, we will be publishing a three-part series, each one dedicated to the most common resolutions of improving one's body, mind and lifestyle. This one revolves around creating a new look for yourself.

LENZ

The Lenz Winery, Peconic

The New York Times, August, 1998

In Tasting, L.I. Wines Hold Own vs. French

By Richard J. Scholem

"Either prestigious French wines are wildly overpriced, Long Island wines are the buy of the ages or both. At least those were the conclusions that resulted from a recent blind tasting of Lenz Long Island wines and high-flying French headliners like La Grande Dame 1988 and '89, Chateau Pétrus 1992, '93 and '94, J. Drouhin, Montrachet Marquis de Laguiche 1994, '95 and '96, and Veuve Clicquot Gold 1989."

"And how do Lenz wines that cost from $10 to $30 stack up in head-to-head competition with French superstars? They equal or surpass them."

DAN TRAVELS

Here and There

Rarely does a prospective Florida visitor admit, "I go to Florida for the cultural opportunities." Yet each year more and more visitors are discovering there is more to Florida than the well publicized warmth in winter, its East Coast beaches and man-made glitz. They are finding the state's West Coast attractions are giving the East Coast's Palm Beach, Miami and Daytona a real run for their vacation dollar.

For instance, when I was considering a West Coast Florida safari, I found a folder touting, "Everything you wanted to know about brown pelicans but perhaps didn't know to ask."

Or a green imprint of an old railroad station with the temptation, "Walk through delightful Dunedin's Scottish heritage."

Or the suggestive "Discover Pinellas," a recreation of "A Thousand Days That Changed The World." Or, more tempting perhaps, a featured display concerned with women and their waists. Someone had also tucked in an invitation to the Frog Pond – an unusual restaurant that boasts over 267 frogs – none of them live, and a truly unusual breakfast menu that would take a vacation to sample. Add a 3,000 year old Egyptian mummy that is only partially clothed and had an unusual history about being "shipwrecked" in Tampa.

Endowed with a long, narrow strip of barrier beach resorts – somewhat similar to North Carolina's Outer Banks, and Long Island's own ocean front protective resort beaches, West Coast Florida runs basically from the famed Tarpon Springs Sponge Capital to the Sunshine Highway Bridge to lower Florida. Today this area is jammed with ways to learn more about all kinds of interesting topics from the Holocaust to JFK, and truly authentic Greek cuisine. A marine aquarium where dolphins, sea turtles and otters swim, and a center where animal therapy successfully works for ailing children. You'll need the best part of a week to see everything.

The bulging drop-down Gulf Coast Peninsula was a bit slower to be developed than the Atlantic area on the far side of the state, but in recent years has come into its own.

Actually, West Coast beaches are now in stiff competition with those on the Atlantic, with high-ranking beach designations by famed beach judge Stephen Leatherman of Florida International University. Two of these in the Clearwater area are Caladesi Island Park No.3 and Fort DeSota Park No.9. Leatherman surveyed 650 beaches. Floridians point out, "No other destination can offer two of the top ten public beaches."

I couldn't find Leatherman's ratings of Long Island beaches, but my guess is that out east of Fire Island, two should get high ratings. Definitely East Hampton and Ammagansett.

Some supporting facts to flesh out Florida's West Coast – Central Florida sightseeing temptations: Just enough to whet the travel appetite for Here to There.

Dunedin is celebrating its 100 birthday and in a small town way, doing a fine job. Dunedin is a Gaelic word meaning "peaceful rest" which somehow doesn't fit with its "come on" describing the town as "a quaint town lined with galleries, boutiques and restaurants that claims to be one of the most walkable cities in the United States."

The citrus industry that grew, and grew, started here in Florida. Yes, they do have an annual Highland Games as well as other European style festivals throughout the year.

Quite different is a morning visit to the Suncoast Seabird Sanctuary, the country's largest. This wild bird hospital provides a tour with truly close-ups of the area's feathered patients, as many as 9,000 a year, with as many as 700 patients at one time. Fine for close-ups of those in the final stages of recuperation.

Now into museum areas – well worthy of exploration. The St. Petersburg Museum houses a replica of the plane which conducted the first commercial flight – the short distance between St. Pete and Tampa, in 1914. You have to stare up at its elevated display position.

Not to be outdone by Holocaust museums in other parts of the world, St. Pete's is the largest of its kind in the US – the centerpiece being a box car from Polish death camps. In addition to core exhibits, it has the only exhibit of concentration camp art.

Then, thanks to the fortunate contribution from a Midwest couple, St. Pete has a collection of the works of Salvador Dali – the world's most comprehensive collection, and Dali only. It's the kind of show you definitely can't say you skipped.

John F. Kennedy's life is memorialized near Tampa Bay, the murdered President's last stop before his fateful visit to Dallas in 1963. It's at the Florida International Museum in St. Pete an is the largest private collection of Kennedy's personal items. (Aside: it's only a slight LI connection – Jackie grew up in East Hampton.)

A later column will continue to with "other" attractions offered visitors by Central Florida's old and new showpeople – from Cypress Gardens that transformed a seventeen acre former swamp into a magnificent garden showcase that added a completely new color display this past Christmas, as well as an ice show. Bok Tower and 128 acres of floral displays leading up to the national landmark and its world's great carillon, and get-involved Fantasy of Flight. This is a uniquely displayed private collection of vintage aircraft where those with steel nerves can pilot a fighter aircraft from the cockpit controls.

Shop'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

I hope everyone took advantage of the tax-free week. With only a few more days of tax-free days left, my friends, Joann and Marie came out east to visit and do some serious shopping. Of course, they took advantage of my knowledge and let me do what I do best. Let's shop!

Even though Christmas shopping is done, I'm still shopping for my granddaughter Krista's seventh birthday coming up on January 25. Off I went to Harry Lillywhite & Son on Jobs Lane in Southampton for traditional charm and unique selection of toys, games and other fun things at this historic store. Krista loves board games and there are lots to choose from here. Filled up my car with all her favorites, all gift-wrapped and ready to go.

One of my favorites's, Pier One on the Montauk Highway in Southampton is having a "red tag clearance sale" going on right now. I spotted a beautiful rattan armchair for only $75, bought two of them. All the holiday merchandise is slashed to half price and there is plenty left. The girls filled up their car with lots of great little gifts at half the price. Assorted barware and stemware are sale priced at $3.50 each, and you can save fifty percent on selected acrylic stemware and holiday paper products.

Aesthetics Home Furnishings is celebrating their second year in business in the Watermill Shoppes with an incredible sale with savings of twenty percent to fifty percent off all of his antique home furnishings and accessory items. The store seems to evolve everytime you enter it. New shipments arrive weekly and there are more bargains than you can bargain for. Happy Anniversary Richard!

At Glorioso's on Main Street in Bridgehampton there is a renovation sale going on right now and you can save from thirty to fifty percent on ladies clothing, jewelry and accessories.

Looking for those neat January sales? Look no further, at The Elegant John at the Red Horse Plaza, East Hampton you will find exactly what you need at discounted prices. The Royal Velvet towel event is running now and you will find that "big and soft" towel that retails for twenty dollars sold here for only $16.99. Other sizes are available at the same discount prices. The Hungarian Supreme Goose Down comforters made especially for this event is too good to be true. Stop in and get your bed linens, Duvet covers, shams, bed skirts, coverlets, and towels, cotton sheets, feather beds and more.

Hey, this is the weather to go skiing and snowboarding. Well, Main Beach Surf and Sport on Montauk Highway in Wainscott has outerwear and more to choose from. There is even a surf report at 537-SURF.

Newtown Lane's La Dolce Vita is also having a "renovation sale" going on with most things discounted seventy-five percent off along with the regular great bargains. Also on Newtown Lane at Springers "Blow Out Sale" save from twenty to fifty percent off on men's fine clothing and accessories.

One of my favorites and I have lot's of favorites, is Curly Willow Homeware on Main Street in East Hampton. There is a "Winter Sale" with thirty to seveny-five percent off homeware, accessories and much more.

On Park Place at Mainlines, the clearance sale is up to fifty percent off on women's and children's clothing and accessories and five and ten dollar baskets.

On Route 114 you will find a neat shop called The Irony Ltd. Specializing in railings for interior and exterior, gates for garden and driveway, lighting fixtures inside and outside, modern furniture and accessories.

At the Long Wharf's Around Again check out the super clearance sale with fifty percent off and much more on re-cycled clothing, household items, furniture, children's clothing and furniture and much more.

Have you been to Flashbacks lately? Well, I have! Joann and Marie and myself had a wonderful time picking and choosing bags, jewelry, accessories and of course the eclectic clothing that is sale priced, fifty percent off. A special group of shoes are also on sale for only ten dollars a pair. Guess how many we bought? Now, that's a whale of a sale.

Now that the holidays are over, this is the time to start getting fit for the summer months. How about doing it at the American Fitness Factory in on Bay Street in Sag Harbor? You can get a corporate rate for only $249 per person with a ten person minimum.

Now that the day is over and my shopping is done, I will take out some time to call my granddaughter Krista to wish her a very happy seventh birthday. Nonna will be there will bells on for your birthday cake.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Managing Investment Risk Through Asset Allocation

Spreading assets over a variety of different investments is perhaps the most important rule one can folloe.

Asset allocation is the act of balancing the three common investment classes: stocks, bonds and cash reserves. Knowing the differences among them is important:

Common stocks, which represent ownership rights in a corporation, entail more risk than other types of financial assets in the short run. But over longer holding periods, they have usually provided the highest returns and the greatest margin over inflation. Common stocks also have the greatest potential for short-term downturns.

Bonds are IOUs issued by corporations, governments and federal agencies. They typically offer higher yields than cash reserves, but their value can fluctuate dramatically in response to changes in interest rates. Bonds generally offer higher current income with less volatility than stocks, but have limited potential for increased returns.

Cash reserves include money market securities such as Treasury Bills and short-term certificates of deposit. Because money market securities have shorter maturities, they typically provide a stable investment value and current interest income. However, inflation can quickly erode the purchasing power of cash, leaving investors short of reaching their financial goals.

Diversification within Asset Classes:

As the stock or bond portions of your portfolio are refined, consider spreading investments among the various categories within a single asset class. For instance, diversification of the stock portion among several strategies to target growth stocks, value stocks, blue chip stocks and others.

A bond allocation may be diversified to include instruments characterized by specific maturities (short, intermediate, or long-term) or different types of bonds, such as U.S. government, corporate or tax-free municipal bonds. Also consider a mixture of domestic and international stock and bond investments.

What Should the Allocation Be?

How much emphasis should be placed on stocks for growth, bonds for income and cash reserves for safety and liquidity will depend in part on an investor's tolerance for risk and the time horizon for reaching financial goals. If the goal is the near-term purchase of a house or car, it may have a shorter time frame calling for lower-or moderate-risk investment approaches.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

ART BEYOND THE HAMPTONS: PART ONE
ST. IVES, ENGLAND

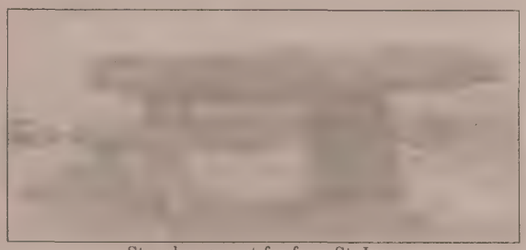
While we may accept the fact that East Hampton is the home of Abstract Expressionism, several visits to St. Ives, England, by this critic have provided fascinating proof of the area's aesthetic contribution. Last year's art tour with a group of enthusiastic and appreciative participants was no exception.

It's readily apparent why this village on England's southwest coast is perfect for artists: a community of single-minded people, beautiful scenery by the sea and good climate not far from London. In the late 1930s, St. Ives was also a refuge for artists wanting to escape London and the war.

It's also apparent that abstract art is still alive and well in St. Ives, even though there have been three generations of artists working there. (This is not to infer that a second local movement, the Newlyn School, has not made international contributions during the late 1800's and early 1900s as well, namely works by Walter Langley and Norman Garstin. The Impressionistic local scenes are glorious and can be seen at Penzance's Penlee Museum.)

Abstract Expressionism is an indigenous part of St. Ives and not only available for viewing in galleries. Art and artists come together, literally, and visitors never feel isolated from such dynamics. For example, Patrick Heron's extraordinary stained glass window is a centerpiece at the Tate Museum. (Mr. Heron, a friend and colleague of many American abstract expressionists, died last year.) Anthony Frost's wildly colored abstractions are hanging at a prestigious seaside restaurant. (Paintings on restaurant walls are not common in St. Ives; it's a space that's treated like a gallery.)



Stonehenge, not far from St. Ives.

Work can be seen at artist studios as well, particularly in the village's old section, a conclave of converted fishermen's cottages. Special open houses bring us to Roy Walker's seaside studio once again (we had been there last year); down the street is Peter Ward's sculpture studio/foundary.

Nearby is Mr. Heron's former working space as well as Ben Nicholson's, who had been inspired by St. Ives roof tops. Sculpture by Mr. Nicholson's wife, Dame Barbara Hepworth, can be seen in front of a East Hampton namesake, Guild Hall (the tourism center). Alfred Wallis' grave has one of his characteristic designs on it. (Speaking of Mr. Wallis, he had a great influence on Mr. Nicholson and, in this critic's opinion, also on local resident, Terry Frost, one of England's foremost abstract artists.)

Farther down the hill overlooking the harbor is where Bob Devereux holds court, presiding over his gallery, The Salt House, and providing not only a history of St. Ives but a reading of his poetry as well.

St. Ives has some of the flavor that the East Hampton art community must have enjoyed years ago, only St. Ives is still able to maintain that ambiance, to everyone's benefit.

HONORING THE ARTIST: KENNY SCHARF

Kenny Scharf is a modest man by any standards, despite the penchant for egocentricity and hype which pervade modern society. Mr. Scharf's modesty is all the more remarkable despite his celebrity as an oustanding painter of the 1970s / 1980s, who along with Keith Haring and Basquiat, derived inspiration from "Street Culture."

Even so, Mr. Scharf is still going strong in the 1990s, his paintings evoking both new meanings and techniques for the future and cherished ideas and styles from the past

A recent visit to the current Whitney Museum's exhibit, "The American Century: Art and Culture, 1950-2000," proves the point. Mr. Scharf's 1986 piece, "Junguloony," conjures up fantasy images in a surreal way recalling Alfonso Ossorio's paintings, yet this work has a political punch as well— that is if you're familiar with Ms. Scharf's stance against the destruction of Brazil's Rainforest. Then the images are not merely colorful, idiosyncratic "characters" and "objects": lush vegetation being eaten up by figures with big eyes and teeth. The very title of the work, "Junguloony," suggests destruction's lunacy, its make-believe, deceptive demeanor contradicting existing evil. Chaos and order survive side-by-side.

Like his art, Ms. Scharf is subtle as well as modest: he doesn't force his point-of-view on spectators. In fact, he invites them into his world, his seemingly magical sphere, where reality eventually takes over— just as the Rainforest itself must surely seduce the people who connect with it, who soon discover another reality where nature is being systematically exterminated.

Mr. Scharf appears to have much in common with his art. For example, he prefers places which are lush and peaceful, close to nature (like his former studio/home in Florida and his present one in California, although we admit we're taking a guess here when characterizing Ms. Scharf's current residence). His life style also appears fueled by energy and spontaneity, like his art, but one that may become chaotic.

Simply stated, Mr. Scharf's life and art are animated— which is certainly appropriate given the fact that he is now working on an animated film or series. ("I kept flying off to lunch from the East Coast to Hollywood to talk about my film ideas, so I thought I'd better move to California making things easier," he says wryly.)

The project in question is called The Universals. Here's how Mr. Scharf briefly describes it: "It's other worldly with humanoids from outerspace. There are bad people, called Normals, and nice guys." While such a description only covers the essentials, count on the film to pinpoint a myriad of important things— done in an ironic style, no doubt.

We can't help but wonder how Mr. Scharf first discovered what was to become his signature work— where did he get his initial inspirations? "I grew up in Southern California, where Pop culture was prevalent," he explains. "Automobiles, signs. And I was influenced by films like The Wizard of Oz. Cartoons from the last twenty years have also influenced me. I think computer-generated imagery is exciting, too, like the animated movie, Antz."

And what about Mr. Scharf's own project that he's hoping to get off the ground? "I like 3-D imagery," he answers without hesitation. "I'm against anything flat. I want to fall into the picture plane." That statement may help explain Mr. Scharf's next comment: "I'm drawn to things that are emotional. I have to experience the actual feeling."

We spectators "feel" something as well when we look at Mr. Scharf's paintings – even if the pieces show the customization of electric appliances, another favorite subject for the artist.

Now that's some feat, but Mr. Scharf more than meets the challenge.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

The Talented Mr. Ripley

THE TALENTED MR. RIPLEY

In our crazy, mish-mosh world of reconstituted mashed potatoes and genetically altered corn flakes, it figures that the self-made man is having an identity crisis. Never mind that for years women have been saying that the self-made man should have given the job to someone more qualified. Perhaps it is simplest to blame the arm twisting influence of movie makers, whose arm-wrestling machismo has created characters of disarming proportions. Any variety of super or sub-human beings able to leap over towering sky-scrapers simply be removing a pair of horn-rimmed glasses.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT RIPLEY

Now...enter the pug-nosed l'il charmer, Mat Damon, as The Talented Mr. Ripley, whose nose got permanently up-turned by pressing it up against Tiffany and Gucci store windows, coveting the "good life" that money can buy. Tom Ripley is SUCH a mean, widdle kid, he doesn't have to sell his soul to the devil...he was too poor to possess a soul. What he does possess is a talent for mimicry, lies, deception and mostly...envy. When fate allows him entry into the plush life of Dickie Greenleaf, a beautiful young man, who has everything. Tom Ripley's taste of that life becomes an all consuming devouring of everything Dickie is and has. Ultimately, Ripley must destroy Dickie to insure his new life...the 1950's La Dolce Vita on the Amalfi Coast where other Americans were reinventing their lives with continental graces, Tom Ripley doesn't have to reinvent himself...he murders Dickie and lives his life.

A PATIENT ENGLISHMAN AS HITCHCOCK

Why make Ripley less of an amoral person? Why give him a conscience? Go back four years...Executive Producer, Sidney Pollack lured the English writer of Italian parentage, Anthony Minghella, to do the screenplay. He had been successfully adapting the story of another awful character, The English Patient and made him more than palatable...an Oscar winner! Now Ripley is a $40 Million dollar project and actors Matt Damon, Gwyneth Paltrow and Cate Blanchett relatively unknown...can one make a repulsive pig's ear out of an expensive silk purse? Not on your life!

Tom Ripley, for all his heinous miserableness, his outsiderness, loneliness, inadequacies, voyeurism and social panic...all very well portrayed by young Matt...he nonetheless maintains that boyish charm that has you rooting for him to "get away with it."

With a drop-dead wonderful cast...the most glamorous of which is the new-comer Jude Law....attractive and magnetic enough to make his "Dickie" perfectly enthralling and loved by both Gwyneth Paltrow as his girlfriend, Marge AND Tom Ripley, the repressed homosexual, who, unable to "have" Dickie..."becomes" Dickie. Interestingly, Tom gets to "sleep" with Dickie after he has bludgeoned him to death and is lying in a pool of blood. The transference of identity is complete...they are blood brothers. Finally, Tom's jealousy and desire are left to sink into the Mediterranean. His "Peeping Tom" jealousy aroused as he furtively watched Dickie do what he called "Marge maintenance"" in the boat cabin and his "Peeping Tom" desires aroused by attending Dickie in the bathtub and following leaving the tub without a towel or robe, seem to have surprised Tom himself!

If there is a real identity crisis in Ripley , the movie...it is the very talented Mr. Minghella as Hitchcock, whose terrain he is traversing. He has added a great deal to the Highsmith novel and a lot of it takes it closer to Hitchcock. Paltrow's Marge was originally conceived by Highsmith as plumpy-dumpy but, Minghella's Marge is more "Grace Kelly society girl" but, unfortunately not nearly attractive enough. So, she is just there...of importance to no one. Minghella has added Cate Blanchett's Meredith a perfect 1950's confused rich girl who can naively trip up Tom. The writer/director has also added a talented gay love interest for Tom that creates a fine balance and Philip Seymour Hoffman gives yet another of his right on performances as a knowledgeable rich kid who sees through Tom.

As pretty a travelogue of Sunny Italy as this is...it's still pales as compared to Hitchcock's 1950 Technicolor backdrops and though Mr. Minghella is a musician and changed Dickie's dilettante pursuit from painting to Jazz, it adds some pop music attractions but being only 45 years old, his choices of music, as with locations in Italy smack of the tritely ordinary...like how many visits to the Spanish Steps are really necessary? or the Piazza San Marco in Venice? Fortunately, there are other good and fresh locations but, once the grand tour of fun and games subsides the persistent dogs that are on Tom's heels take on a stumbling, unbelievable ennui that would have Hitchcock impatient! even, as a razor blade bleeds in the pocket of a white bathrobe!

MInghella should have retained his own identity.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

For just good old-fashioned winter warmth a pot roast, simmering long and slow with aromatic vegetables, is appealing despite the decline of beef consumption for many individuals.

Pot roast can be prepared with brisket, rump (top or bottom round) or boneless chuck. These meats are perfectly suited to the long, slow simmering technique that is essential to tenderize the somewhat less expensive cuts. The moist-heat method of braising over gently heat is an effective method to tenderize meats. The meat is browned initially, then simmered slowly in enough liquid to barely cover.

A 3-4 pound pot roast can feed up to eight people. When preparing pot roast for fewer servings, pot roast makes great leftovers, hot or cold. By all means prepare your pot roast up to a day ahead if you choose. When reheated the next day in its own juices the dish will taste even better. The cooking utensil of choice here is enamel over iron such as a tight-lidded Le Creuset oven-going casserole. If this or a similar cooking utensil is available to you, refrigerate the cooked dish, after cooling overnight, but be sure to bring to room temperature before reheating when ready to serve. Cold meat slices make delicious sandwiches.

Cooking a pot roast is good, simple fare when you work with carefully selected ingredients.

POT ROAST FLORENTINE

Known as Stracotto alla Fiorentina, this Italian pot roast is seasoned with an herb mixture and whole carrots drawn through the center of the meat for flavor and presentation when sliced.
Serves 6-8

3 cloves garlic, finely minced
1 cup fresh basil leaves
1/2 cup flat-leaf Italian parsley leaves
2 tablespoons fresh sage leaves
3 - 3 1/2 pounds rump roast or first-cut brisket
3 carrots, peeled, trimmed and left whole
2 carrots, peeled, trimmed and coarsely chopped
2 large red onions, peeled and coarsely chopped
2 celery ribs, trimmed and coarsely chopped
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper
1 cup dry red wine
2 1/2 cup peeled, seeded and chopped plum tomatoes
OR
1 can (1 Lb. 12 Oz.) drained plum tomatoes, chopped
2 cups hot water or meat broth

1. Place the garlic and green herbs in a food processor fitted with steel knife and process until the mixture is a paste. Set aside

2. Insert a long thin slicing knife through the meat lengthwise. Turn the knife in the of slit to enlarge the opening so that it will accommodate the whole carrot. Make two more slits, about 2 1/2 inches apart repeat.

3. With fingers, pack about 1/3 of the garlic-herb paste into each opening; then insert a whole carrot. If carrots extend beyond the edge, trim ends even with the meat.

4. In a large heavy casserole, heat olive oil and saute chopped carrots, onions and celery over medium heat for about five minutes. With slotted spoon, transfer vegetables to a side dish. Add meat and brown slowly on both sides, about 12-15 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste and return vegetables to the pan. Add wine and cook until reduced by half. Skim surface fat as wine reduces. Add tomatoes, cover pan and simmer slowly over gentle heat for 2 1/2-3 hours. Add hot water or broth as needed; turn meat several times during cooking.

5. Remove pot roast from pan and place on a cutting board. Let rest for 10-12 minutes. Cut meat into 1/2 inch slices and serve with pan juices. Serve with roast new potatoes with fresh rosemary.
Note: After slicing, meat can be returned to the pan with the vegetable juices and refrigerated, covered, overnight. Return meat to room temperature

AIGUILLETTE DE BOEUF BRAISEE

This aromatic braised round roast calls for a couple of sprigs of parsley. A sprig consists of three leafy branches held together by one stem
Serves 6-8

2 tablespoons olive oil
3 pounds, boneless top round or bottom round roast
Coarse salt and ground black pepper
1 onion, thinly sliced
2 carrots, thinly sliced
2 cups dry red wine
1 1/2-2 cups chicken or beef broth
2 sprigs parsley
1 rib celery, quartered

For vegetable garnish
6-8 medium-sized boiling potatoes, cooked
1 bunch baby carrots, cooked
12-16 small white onions, cooked

1. Heat the oil in an oven-going casserole, such as enamel over iron. Put in the meat and brown on all sides. Add sliced onions and carrots and saute with the meat, moving around the vegetables as necessary until well coated with pan juices.

2. Add red wine and bring to the boil, uncovered, until the liquid has reduced to one-half the original amount. Pour over the broth and add parsley and celery. Cover and cook slowly for about 2 1/2-3 hours. Turn meat 3 or 4 times adding more broth or water as needed. Transfer meat to a warm platter and let rest. Skim excess fat from cooking liquid and if not thick enough, boil it for a few minutes to reduce liquid to desired consistency.

3. When tender slice the meat on a carving board and transfer to a warm platter. Pour over the sauce reduction and serve with cooked vegetable garnish. Serve hot. Voila!

HEALTH, SPORTS & FITNESS

Pilates Winter Workshop at In Balance Studio

Lesa Salvani, owner of In Balance Pilates Studio in Sag Harbor, is offering a six week Pilates mat workshop this winter. Mat classes are a good supplement to the private or semi-private instruction taught at the popular exercise studio. The exercises can also be practiced on their own at home as a great way to lengthen and strengthen muscles.

In mat classes you do Pilates exercises without using the Pilates machines. The classes are offered at a lower rate than private or semi-private sessions. But the real benefit is that, once learned, you can take the exercises home with you.

The Pilates method is based on strengthening the abdominal area, the core focus region which supports the lower back. Joseph Pilates developed this unique system of exercises almost ninety years ago to strengthen and tone muscles, increase flexibility and balance and improve posture. Professional dancers discovered Pilates in the 1940s and '50s. But it is no longer the secret of dancers. Today Pilates is rapidly growing in popularity throughout the country. In Balance Studio attracts a loyal following which includes models, actors, magazine editors, artists as well as people with injuries, such as chronic back pain.

Lesa Salvani oversees all of her certified instructors and clients. Ms. Salvani approaches her clients with knowledge and history, unparalleled on the East End.

Mat classes are a good introduction to the Pilates workout, which is customized to suit a person's individual needs. The exercises are considered more "cerebral" than most workouts and are based on the isolation and reorganization of muscle patterns. The mat workshop program is designed to strengthen, stretch, tone and contour the body in a non-weight bearing workout. The floor exercises give you the opportunity to work out while you recover from an injury, get back in shape or just increase muscle tone and stamina. And, if you have been working with the Pilates machinery, mat classes offer a way to continue at home or while travelling.

The six week mat course begins the week of January 28. Classes are Tuesday mornings, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and Wednesday evenings, 6-7 p.m. Class sizes are limited to twelve people. Please call 725-8282 to register. The In Balance Studio is located on Bay Street in Sag Harbor, at American Fitness.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Toni here, filling in for Joe this week, with a brief update on some LIFB activities. The educational video we told you about earlier should be ready by the end of January. It is an overview of agriculture on Long Island, and is segmented into three parts, each approximately five minutes long. The first part covers history and geography. The second follows the seed from planting and growing through harvest, and the diversity of Long Island commodities. The third touches on shipping, marketing, cooperating industries, etc. Growers will be available to come into the classroom with the tape and talk with students after viewing. We hope to host a preview for teachers, so if you are, or know, a teacher (the video was created with the fourth grade curriculum in mind), I'd love to hear from you. Our number is 631-727-3777.

Our Annual Dinner Dance, at which we present the Amherst Davis Memorial Farmer Citizen Award, will be held on Saturday, March 4 at the beautiful and popular Giorgios Restaurant in Baiting Hollow. Im pleased to announce that the honoree this year is Nate Corwin of Ivy Acres. Nate has done so much over the years; it's hard to know where to begin. So I wont. Watch this column – I'm sure Joe is going to want to tell you more. But I must say, I don't know too many people who are more deserving, and I'm looking forward to the celebration. Congratulations, Nate!

Well, Jennifer Halsey and I (along with Joe and the rest of our gang) just got back from the American Farm Bureau National Convention in Houston. Saturday was long and arduous, beginning when I awoke at 3 a.m. Jenn probably had to get up even earlier in order to get to my house by 4:15. We had to be at MacArthur Airport by 5 for our 6 a.m. plane. We arrived in Houston at 10:30a.m. (Texas time) and finding our hotel became a comedy of errors. Houston is not the easiest city to navigate, to say the least, and several others in our group had the same problem.

That evening, after all the tension of a months worth of waiting, we learned that Jenn did not win. It was a big disappointment, but there was so much competition out there nationally. And as I told Jenn – that would have just been the icing on the cake. She was the first Long Island winner of the State Award and she also made state history as the first single female ever to win. These are enormous accomplishments in and of themselves. Best of all, we have made the nation stand up and take notice of Long Island! We are so very proud of her, and proud, also, to have such an accomplished young woman on our board.

Toni Munna is director of public relations of Long Island Farm Bureau

POLICE BLOTTER

BEST OF THE BLOTTER 1999: PART TWO

A puppy obedience expert from East Hampton was in federal court in June defending himself against charges of drug trafficking and money laundering. Matthew Posnick has been accused of distributing marijuana in large quantities and of allegedly laundering millions of dollars from the alleged drug trade. Mr. Posnick's business, Daddy Love, provided puppy obedience classes for the Animal Rescue Fund up until last spring when Mr. Posnick unexpectedly disappeared. He was arrested by federal officials in March and some of his assets were seized including his house, a truck with K9SHRINK plates, and his father's coin collection. Said coin collection was valued at over $1,000,000, however when Mr. Posnick inherited said collection it was not nearly as valuable leading federal officials to suspect that he either added to the collection in recent months, allegedly using drug money to do so, or the collection was undervalued at the time it was inherited all of which would suggest that someone defrauded the government somewhere along the line. In addition to the seizure of the house, the coin collection and the truck, federal officials also seized three handguns and a rifle which belonged to Mr. Posnick. One of the handguns was reportedly Velcro-ed to the underside of Mr. Posnick's desk. Despite his troubles, Mr. Posnick's friends offered to help him raise bail by putting their own homes up as collateral.

Shawn Christman was allegedly planning to do some illegal baking at the time of his arrest in late August. Police responded to a noise complaint on South Euclid Avenue. Loud music was emanating from an apartment behind the Trail's End Restaurant. Police traced said music to the aforementioned apartment and went inside. In the kitchen of said apartment, they found a black metal baking pan on the table with a green leafy substance spread out on it. Said green leafy material was field tested and appeared to be marijuana. The aforementioned baking pan and the alleged marijuana were seized by police, along with Mr. Christman, the occupant of said apartment, and taken to headquarters. There the green leafy substance was weighed and came in at 4.6 ounces and there Christman was charged with criminal possession of marijuana.

Someone entered A Little Bit of Everything on August 31 and attempted to steal a package of Pokeman cards valued at $24.99. The suspect entered the aforementioned store, reached behind the counter and grabbed said Pokeman cards. Suspect was apprehended on the deck area behind said store and charged with petty larceny. Suspect was then turned over to his/her mommy and daddy.

Sally Peterson of Charleston, South Carolina; Stuart, Florida and Edgartown, Massachusetts, lost her beige Louis Vuitton suitcase and its contents in September. Ms. Peterson last saw said Louis Vuitton luggage at the East Hampton airport terminal where she left it unattended while she visited the ladies room. When she returned, the bag was gone. The bag itself is quite expensive, but its contents were even more valuable. Said bag contained three gold chains, one diamond and emerald cut ring, a diamond and sapphire gold watch, a gold bracelet and two gold rings with diamonds and rubies. The value of the missing jewelry is estimated at $120,000.

Anthony Romeo of Oceanside allegedly got out of hand while visiting our area on October 8. Police responded to a call indicating that a suspicious male was walking in the roadway on Route 27. Romeo was allegedly walking in the middle of said roadway when police arrived. He was wearing blue jeans and no shirt. As police approached, Romeo allegedly waved his arms in the air and officers inquired as to his well being. At that time, Romeo allegedly jumped on the hood of the police car and began to pound his fist on the windshield causing same to shatter. The patrolman inside was showered with fragments of broken glass. Then Romeo allegedly climbed up on the roof of said patrol car, broke the antennas off and proceeded to pound on the aforementioned roof with his aforementioned fists. He allegedly refused to come down and began to take the rest of his clothes off. Backup officers arrived on the scene and Romeo was finally subdued. He was unconscious at the time of his arrest and was first taken to Southampton Hospital. Romeo was charged with criminal mischief and resisting arrest.

Dan's LETTERS

LOVED DAN'S DOG STORY
Dear Dan,

When we were out at our house in Montauk over Thanksgiving weekend, I read your article about the adoption of the newest member of your family. The subject was particularly timely because we had just watched a similar topic being covered on the TV series, Providence. (It was about the large number of dogs being put "down" because there were not enough homes to adopt them. In the story one little girl made it her crusade to feed them a nice last meal for Thanksgiving.)

Loved the description of what you went through to bring your new pet home. When I read that one of the drop off sites could have been West Point, I decided to write you. We are only about 30 minutes south of West Point and would have gladly helped in transporting your pet out to Long Island. Something tells me this may not be the last addition to your canine clan, so if the locale ends up being in upper Westchester or within our driving range, feel free to give us a call!

Evelyn and Herb Mocbeichel,
Westchester

LOVE FROM AFAR
Dear Dan,

Fell in love with the Hamptons, and your paper! As an editor-in-chief of a homes and antiques magazine (Dutch edition), I'd like to live there. At least I can read your classifieds, and make reservations for September-October next year. Keep up the good work!

Anna Van Wittenberghe,
Rotterdam, The Netherlands

SWEET AND LOVING
Dear Dan,

In the more than forty years I have known you and the thirty-nine years that I have been reading Dan's Papers, no story ever written by you was as sweet and loving as "Holiday Dog." As much as I enjoy your mishegoss, your true life stories are the best.

Shep Scheinberg,
Quogue

CANINE PROFILES?
Dear Dan,

Your piece about the new dog you were rescuing was enjoyable. There are so many of us "out here" who have canine companions who are so dear to us, perhaps you might consider a column akin to "Who's Here" called "My Dog."

Michael Daly,
Bridgehampton

THE TIMES GOT IT WRONG
Dear Dan,

You should take great pleasure in the fact that the article, by Jerry Cimisi, on the Environmental Impact Statement on the High Flux Beam Reactor, of Brookhaven National Laboratory was well balanced and described the Statement as indicating that there would be less than one additional cancer case per year from the reactor, if it were operating, compared to 900 cases per year from normal radiation background. The Long Island section of The New York Times (December 5) got the numbers wrong. The Times quoted the number from the reactor as 900, a far cry from less than one. My calculation of the actual number from Laboratory operations, using figures from the Environmental Impact Statement, was 0.0002 additional cases per year, a non-significant figure even if there were calculation mistakes of a factor of 1,000. Obviously, there could be no environmental reason to shut the reactor.

Richard B. Setlow,
East Quogue

THE REST OF THE STORY
Dear Dan,

When I was in North Sea last weekend, I was reading Dan's Papers and tore out to take home the story of your new dog. I unfortunately did not tear out page twenty-six etc. for the ending. Would you be good enough to send me in the enclosed self-addressed stamped envelope a copy of page twenty-six and any others to finish the story? I love your animal stories and enjoy your paper when I come to the Island.

Joan Anderson-Weingartner,
Arnold, MD

UNIQUE FASHIONS
Dear Dan,

On behalf of Nancy Sinoway Design I would like to thank you for the special holiday feature, "What To Wear for That Special Occasion?," which appeared in the December 17 issue of Dan's Papers. We hope your readers enjoyed hearing about Nancy's unique fashions and we look forward to working with you again in the future. Have a very happy new year.

KUDOS FOR SALLY
Dear Dan,

Becoming a full-time Shelter Islander over the past three plus years has been made easier through Sally Flynn's weekly articles. Her story last week touched me deeply in the sense of how our lives evolve and what becomes important as we go down life's road. Being in my early 60s I have experienced most of what Sally mentions and find there is, I hope, a little bit or a lot, of Aunt Ida in us.

I enjoy Sally's humorous articles and I'm more than pleased she can also touch the heart so deeply. Hope she will continue to provide us with further insights on life.

• Do you use your pool as a part of you physical fitness regimen?
✓ Commercial Clearwater can make sure that you have the healthiest environment for exercise.

• Would you like your pool to be as safe as it can be for you and your loved ones?
✓ Manual pool care is often messy, and proper care is usually not taken. Commercial Clearwater Controllers and Monitoring Systems keep a "watchful eye" on water quality around the clock. They make precise adjustments in chemical additions according to constant water testing and keep pools in top condition.

• Would you like to try any of our Controllers or Monitoring Systems for one month free; on charge, no obligation?
